Siege at Kitselas

TERRACE — Angry Kitselas band members vow to continue their occupation of the band's administrative office until the chief and deputy chief resign.

The protesters have been occupying the office around the clock since last Wednesday when they staged a sit-in and demanded the band council resign. They want new elections to be called for next month.

"We're in this for the long haul," said protesting band member Ron Mould. "We'll stay here for as long as it takes."

Group spokesman Ron Nyce estimates the band has lost more than $3 million in federal grants

Chief told to quit

this year because of what he charges is the incompetence of the band council. The loss of that money means the planned construction of about 20 new houses this year at the band's new subdivision near Kitselas Canyon won't go ahead, he said, adding the housing program has been dealt a setback of at least a full year.

Citing "irregularities" in the band's finances, Nyce presented petitions to the band council on Wednesday calling for the resignations of chief councillor Ralph Wright and deputy chief/administrator Brian Seymour. The petitions — signed by 53 band members represent a majority of Kitselas electors, he says.

Nyce said the band had previously negotiated the housing grants with the Department of Indian Affairs and the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation (CMHC), but that money wasn't pursued by the new administration, elected last May to two-year terms.

"We feel this is the only recourse left to us," Nyce said, adding numerous meetings to resolve the dispute have failed. "We have attempted to voice our concerns through normal channels."

Wright suffered a stroke shortly after last year's election, and appointed Seymour, who is his son-in-law, deputy chief and administrator — a move that protesters say puts Seymour in a conflict of interest between his elected position as a councillor and his appointed office.

"It's dictatorship, is what it is," protester Fred Mason said. Chief Wright has not return-

Logging companies want say in Nisga'a talks

TERRACE — Forest companies here want to know more about the progress of negotiations on the Nisga'a land claim to 25,000 square kilometres of northwestern B.C.

"This could affect our industry and our whole lifestyle here," said Skeena Cellulose spokesman Pat Ogawa. "We want to know what the hell's going on."

Ogawa said he is close to arranging a series of meetings for local third party interests to meet with negotiators for the province, the federal government and the Nisga'a Tribal Council. He said the meetings could be scheduled for as early as next week.

One meeting would be with forest licensees, small business loggers, the Northwest Loggers Association and the ministry of forests.

Aldermen from Terrace and Stewart, regional district representatives and northwest

MLAs would participate in a second information meeting.

And a third meeting would be with local chambers of commerce and Rotary Clubs, which Ogawa says would give "a reasonable cross section of the public."

"I feel that we as citizens should have the opportunity to have input," he added.

The Nisga'a claim, centred on the Nass River valley, incorporates large portions of the tree farm licences held by Skeena Cellulose, Orenda Forest Products, and other companies.

The current focus of the land claim talks is working out a deal on interim measures prior to a final settlement. An agreement on interim measures will determine whether third parties—such as logging and mining companies—will be allowed to continue resource extraction while the main negotiations—continue.

According to provincial officials, Nisga'a negotiators tried and failed during interim measures talks to get a one-year delay in the approval of Orenda Forest Products' proposed $365 million groundwood pulp and paper mill just south of Lakelse Lake.

Delay cited in abortion death

TERRACE — Doctors didn't treat internal bleeding quickly enough in the case of a 19-year-old native woman who died here of abortion complications, a coroner's report says.

Myrna George lay bleeding in Mills Memorial Hospital for three days following a Sept. 11, 1991, abortion before doctors here decided she should be flown to St. Paul's Hospital in Vancouver. She died two hours after arrival of heart failure on Sept. 14.

Coroner Jim Lynch points to a delay in recognizing the internal bleeding that followed a rupture of the uterus as a "significant factor" leading to her death.

"The responsibility for the recognition of hemorrhage in this period rests with the gynecologist performing the operation," Lynch said in his inquiry report.

That gynecologist — Terrace Dr. Gordon Boyd — also had a "different recollection of some of the events than those set out in the hospital records," Lynch added.

His report lists the cause of death as being multiple organ failure due to the massive bleeding that was caused by the laceration of the uterus during the abortion procedure.

George received more than five litres of blood in the hours after the abortion on Sept. 11 before doctors operated again that night to repair the rupture. She remained comatose at Mills Memorial Hospital on a respirator and monitors from the completion of the second operation until Sept. 14, when her condition deteriorated further and she was flown out.

Dr. Boyd refused to comment last week.

The hospital's chief of medical staff, Dr. Lani Almas, said the type of complication that ultimately killed George isn't uncommon when performing abortions.

"It is marvellously easy to perforate a pregnant uterus," she said. "There was no error in the technique used. And I think the report states that."

Almas said Boyd is "eminently qualified" to carry out therapeutic abortions.

Lynch's report also pointed to other risk factors — the fact that it was George's sixth pregnancy and third abortion and that she was abusing alcohol and Tylenol prior to the abortion — as possibly contributing to the outcome.

"It is well known that rates of morbidity and mortality are higher in members of our Native Indian society than others in British Columbia," Lynch states in the report. "Myrna George exemplifies the social setting which places these people at risk. Raised in a family with one parent having a drinking problem, Myrna herself drank alcohol to excess and had multiple pregnancies between the ages of 16 and 19."

He added that he believes the investigation puts to rest the possibility that George received a lower standard of care because she was a native Indian.

"The case under investigation does not demonstrate any evidence that there was any lack of responsibility shown by multiple members of the medical team," the report says.

Lynch recommends:
• That the College of Physicians and Surgeons conduct an in-depth review of the case.

• That the hospital's chief of medical staff review the case with the medical staff involved in an attempt to emphasize the appropriate monitoring and treatment of post-operative

Mom vows to sue

TERRACE — Myrna George's mother says she is launching a malpractice suit against Terrace Dr. Gordon Boyd.

Maureen George believes her daughter would be alive today if doctors had reacted faster to internal bleeding she suffered after having an abortion here.

She points to the seven hours that passed between when her daughter started receiving units of blood after the abortion to when doctors operated a second time to repair her perforated

George wants to know why so much time was allowed to pass before action was taken to save her daughter when, she points out, Myrna was obviously in danger. If there had been a quicker response, she maintains "Myrna would be here today."

George is also angry she wasn't given the option of going through with a coroner's inquest, and says she may appeal coroner Jim Lynch's decision to issue only an inquiry report.

Had the case gone to inquest, doctors and nurses involved could have been subpoenaed to testify about what happened.

"Hearing the report was like living through it all over again — like waiting in the hospital with Myrna lying there suffering and nobody doing anything," she said. "I was told it would take a long time to get over this, but I don't think I ever will."

BURNS LAKE — Donald Jack, charged in the double murder of two brothers on the Cheslatta Reserve, today appeared at a preliminary hearing in provincial court

That hearing will determine whether there is sufficient evidence to bring him to trial. Jack, 62, is charged with two counts of second degree murder. HOUSTON — Calf moose hunting season will go ahead despite a 2,000 name petition calling for its end.

Local hunters have blamed the calf season for the decline in the numbers of bulls.

Wildlife branch biologist Rick Marshall said the season will open at the end of September and end in mid-October, a little earlier than in the past.

VANDERHOOF — The chamber of commerce here has formed a committee fo tackle the problem of lottering in the downtown area.

Suggestions include a special place off main street where young people can congregate and introducing a no-loitering by-law.

The committee will findout how other communities deal with the problem. SMITHERS — A machine the Environment ministry acquired two months ago to measure air quality has yet to be taken out of its box.

A ministry spokesman explained the delay was caused by the time needed to prepare liability forms the Catholic school board had required the equipment will be installed on school grounds.

Court threat still hangs over Bobsein

TERRACE — Health ministry something," Bowering said. officials will likely begin prosecuting Bobsein Crescent residents for sewage violations if talk about a new sewer system doesn't soon turn to action.

Skeena Health Unit medical health officer David Bowering said raw sewage in the ditches of the Thornhill subdivision remains a health hazard.

And he said the danger of disease outbreak will grow with the arrival of warmer weather and more kids playing out-

"There's an ongoing danger that someone could chase a baseball into a ditch there and come into contact with

He said he has held back on taking residents to court in the hopes that the regional district will find a way to build a proposed $5 million sewer system for the area.

"If we come to the point where it doesn't look like there's going to be any movement, then we probably won't have any option," Bowering explained. "At that point we'd have to turn it over to the courts."

"I hope we never get to that point," he added, "but I haven't heard any backhoes starting up so far."

To date one homeowner -

David Giesbrecht - has been ordered to clean up his septic system. He received the order following a crackdown by the health ministry on homes with failed septic systems.

The sewage surfaces in ditches and vards in the area because of poor soil conditions and a high water table.

The province's final offer of a 75 per cent subsidy brings the cost of the new system down to $817 per homeowner every year for 20 years.

Bobsein homeowners predict that price will never get approval from other residents, so they're looking for ways to further reduce the cost.

Subdivision work begins

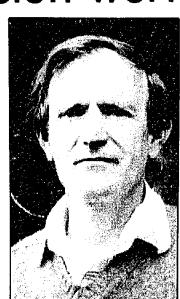

TERRACE — With the city apparently already on course to experience a record year for construction, work is now under way on a new, 41 lot subdivision.

Bench Developments Ltd. -Stan Shapitka and Russ Schauer are the principals in the company - have started clearing the site off Thomas, between Cooper and Twedle.

Shapitka says installation of services - they'll be underground for half the lots is scheduled to begin within the next week and the lots will be ready for house building by the end of June or early July.

The development will include a cul-de-sac road emptying on to Thomas. Half the lots will face on to this and the remainder will front on to Thomas, Cooper or Twedle. They will vary from 8,000-14,000 sq.ft. and cost between $22,500 and $30,000.

Shapitka said Bench Developments will pay the city $175,000 which covers the cost of extending its services to the edge of the site and half the cost of paving portions of Cooper and Twedle. The company will also have to pay for all such work within the subdivision.

Another subdivision development in the works on the bench is that of alderman Mo Takhar. His property, east of the Bench Development site and stretching from Halliwell to Twedle, was bought in December of last year

However, before that project goes ahead, he is asking the city to agree to a land swap deal. In a letter to council, David Lane - acting on behalf of Takhar - explained city staff had asked the original, cul-de-sac concept be altered so that the internal road connected Halliwell and Twedle.

While this had been done, Lane pointed out Takhar would be giving up close to 38,000 sq.ft. of the property to accommodate the amendment.

Lane therefore proposed the city cede to Takhar approximately 46,00 sq.ft. of its own land just to the south of the proposed subdivision. Noting some of that land was "unusable" because of its proximity to the escarpment, Lane estimated the buildable area of city land sought at $40,350 sq.ft.

Council's planning and public works committee has recommended the city get a "comprehensive appraisal" of the land involved and that information then be studied by its internal project planning and review committee.

SCHOOL NOTES

No money for teachers

SCHOOL TRUSTEES here approved a $37.6 million budget at their April 14 board meeting.

Board chairman Edna Cooper described it as a hold-theline budget with no cuts but no major spending increases either. Trustees said the budget allows for the maintenance of existing service levels and a 2.4 per cent increase for school

But they said there's no money in the budget for any salary increases beyond what exists in the present collective agreement. The contract local teachers went to the brink of a strike for last spring expires June 30.

Trustees take pay hikes
TRUSTEES VOTED unanimously Apr. 14 to give themselves pay raises of more than 20 per cent.

School trustees' salaries go up to $7,400 from $5,800 - an increase of 27 per cent. The chairman's salary goes up 23 per cent to $9,750 from $7,900 a year.

The increases are retroactive to last Dec. 1, when newly elected trustees took office.

Terrace trustee Stew Christensen said the increases were based on a study of trustees' salaries in 10 other similar sized school districts.

New trustee appointed
A NEW FACE will join the School District 88 board at its May 12 meeting in Stewart.

Larry Moore has been appointed a school trustee for the native reserves of Gitwangak, Kitwancool and Kitsegukla by education minister Anita Hagen.

Moore - recently elected chief councillor of Gitwangak fills the vacancy created when nobody ran for that seat in last November's elections. His term of office expires Nov. 30,

Board dodges hot survey A CONTROVERSIAL survey that includes questions on sex, suicide and drug use won't be given to local students.

Board chairman Edna Cooper said trustees decided the questionnaire wasn't appropriate because some of its questions "presume a predetermined response."

The McCreary Centre Society's adolescent health survey has also been rejected by school boards in Vancouver and the Okanagan. It was to be given to 25,000 students provincewide in Grades 7 through 12.

The survey's questions — particularly the ones about sex and drug use — have drawn fire because they assume experience in those areas.

"How old were you when you tried marijuana for the first time?" asks one question. "How old were you when you had sexual intercourse for the first time?"

Along with other health and nutrition questions, the survey also asks students about tobacco, alcohol and hard drug use, if they've been sexually or physically abused by family members, and if they've ever considered committing suicide.

"There seems to be a general reassessment of this questionnaire," schools superintendent Frank Hamilton noted.

'That's what it's been ever since you guys have been elected in," Mason told Seymour. "It's been no comment to the people that elected you in."

Nyce stresses that the protesters are fighting the system more than the individual leaders in this case.

He said the Indian Act's "archaic" electoral system has no provisions for recall of band councils.

"It's our intent to make them accountable to the people," Nyce said.

Other reforms are also needed, he said, including the need to end the practice of newly elected band councils firing the band office staff.

"It seems like it's just a normal pattern for offices to be cleared out and a whole new adestablished."

Protection of those positions would give band offices continuity and experience.

So far the Department of Indian Affairs has taken no action in the Kitselas dispute.

"We never felt or believed that they would be able to legislate a settlement," Nyce

"That's what it's been ever since you guys have been elected in. It's been no comment to the people that elected you in."

said. "They have to abide by the Indian Act, and that is the system we have to work to change."

A group of Moricetown band members who unsuccessfully called for an investigative audit of their band council came to Terrace Friday to support the Kitselas protesters.

A coalition of natives in the Gitksan and Wet'suwet'en area has been formed calling for band council reform and a native ombudsman to be accountable to native people. Spokesman Alice Kruta says the coalition strongly supports the Kitselas protest.

The band office is remaining open, and Nyce assures band members on social assistance will be able to get their cheques.

He said the confrontation is taking its toll on his people.

"This is very difficult. We have not taken this action lightly," Nyce said, adding: "You still have to live across the street or next door to that person afterwards."

Band members at a Thursday night meeting at the Church of God spoke of the need for a healing feast when the dispute is over to bring the band back together.

"The NDP is playing exactly the same game as the previous government."

So says Mike Barker, a Health Employees Union member at Vancouver General Hospital.

The charge he's laying against Mike Harcourt's government is it's using labour legislation introduced by the Socreds to deal with the health workers strike — legislation the NDP was quick to condemn when it was comfortably in opposition.

What particularly ticks off Barker and his cohorts is the NDP told them it was all going to be different when they took over.

Okay, they may have a point, but let's get realistic, guys.

You should know pre-election promises are not and never have been real promises. They're just things politicians say in front of a partisan crowd when there is no danger at that particular moment that they will have to carry out what they say.

And when they get into power? Heck, that's a whole new ball game. Unforseen circumstances, cleaning up after the previous administration, dealing with the realities of the situation: the reasons for the volte face are legion.

And completely predictable.

It may not be the way God planned it but it's certainly the way politicians, whatever their stripe, behave.

VICTORIA - A few weeks back, I wrote a column on the desperate need to combat the horrors of physical and sexual abuse of women and children.

I concluded by saying that I couldn't think of a better use of taxpayers' money than for programs to rid our society of this festering sore.

Happily, I'm not the only one advocating the allocation of more financial resources, on a massive scale if necessary, to turn around the ugly tide of family violence and abuse.

After nearly a year of investigating the problem, the Task Force on Family Violence has released its final report. It, too, considers immediate and substantial increases in funding the number one priority.

The report entitled Is Anyone Listening? is a disturbing document. It lights up a repugnant and loathsome corner of contemporary society, filled with terrible images of pain, fear and humiliation.

The report is very specific in its analysis of abuse, blaming the conditioning of society as a whole rather than just the deviant actions of individuals. Family violence, the report says, is a matter of power.

"Women and children lack power in our society. Family and sexual violence is an expression of the abuse of power - violence by the powerful in our society against the less powerful.

"It is integrally bound up with sexism, ageism, racism, homophobia, discrimination against people with disabilities of violence as a way to assert control.''

That's a bitter pill to swallow for anyone who believes in the inherent good in mankind, but denying that some otherwise good people do bad things means denying the problem of physical and sexual

From the Capital

by Hubert Beyer

And exist it does. Here are some excerpts from the report.

A woman remembering her childhood: "At age three or four, my father raped me. I remember him choking me, his hands on my throat. I felt different growing up, different . from anyone else. I remember running away at age seven."

A grade 7 girl: "I wanted to go to the school dance. My dad said only sleazy girls would go. He said I'd become a prostitute. He saw I was crying so he hit and kicked me because he thought I didn't understand.'

A battered woman quoting her former husband: "Don't ever open your mouth to speak to me, unless it's really important. You're so stupid, I don't think you'll ever say anything important."

A woman about abuse at her husband's hands: "The only freedom I has was when I went to work. When I was late coming home, he had a bottle of acid to throw at me."

On wife abuse, the report had this to say: "Traditionally, the woman is seen as the one who keeps the family together, and who sets aside her own . needs to do that. Our society assumes that is she is being beaten, she must not be a 'good wife'. If she stays with her partner, she must either enjoy the abuse or not see it as a problem. Victim-blaming is a deeply rooted facilitator of violence."

Women who are battered, the report goes on to say, often see themselves as unwortent. They may even feel they deserve to be beaten.

And then there are the children who may not themselves be beaten, but witness physical abuse of their mothers at the hands of their fathers. The effect, according to the report, is the same as if the children themselves are victims of abuse.

"These children tend to suffer from more somatic. psychological and behavioural dysfunctions than do children who have not grown up witnessing violence.

So, now that we have identified the problem, how are we going to solve it?

First of all we have to demonstrate a commitment to want to solve the problem. Then, we have to be willing to allocate whatever resources it takes to solve it. That takes money, probably more than even the experts can imagine.

We need more homes for battered women, but housing and protecting abused women and children alone isn't enough. We must get at the symptoms of the disease.

The report stresses the need for early intervention. That means agencies dealing with abuse must be able to detect early signs of abuse.

And just as society did with the problem of drunk driving, it must develop a collective repulsion for abuse. We must shout it from the roof tops that we're no longer willing to look the other way. Only then will we be able to put abuse

Rarely a week goes by that a sheepish customer doesn't drag in the tattered remains of some sort of seat with fist-sized gaps in its foam padding and its upholstery fabric hanging in shreds like a figure skater's skirt.

When it comes to ripping apart upholstery, dogs lead the pack. Unlike cats, they don't settle for fraying a few threads on a chair back or corner. No, sir. Pooches mutilate.

They chew such big holes in sofa seats Michelle Hendry could drop a basketball through. They chomp bike seats down to bare metal. They munch craters in overstuffed chair arms. And they reduce snowmobile seats to sleek low lines by yanking off the backrest hump.

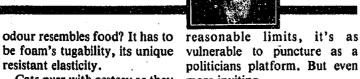

Dogs and cats aren't alone in biting off more than they can chew, Horses gnaw landau tops off Cadillacs parked in their paddock for a short spell. Cows hone their incisors scraping foam from tractor seats. Even geese chase monotony by pinching spoon-shaped cunks out of dirtbike seats.

In the woods, logging contractors suffer porcupine chewing up equipment seats, or ravens perching on the seats and plucking foam through vinyl punctures like a hairdresser hooking wisps of a woman's hair through a foam cap before applying frosting bleach.

Canada's future at stake

By ALLAN R. TAYLOR Allan R. Taylor is the chairman and chief executive officer of the Royal Bank of Canada. Born in Saskatchewan, Mr.

He became in 1986. The following is an excerpt of a speech given to shareholders earlier this year.

Taylor joined the bank in 1949.

Nations can make mistakes, and pay heavily for them. Now even we seem to be embarking on our own march of folly.

Too many Canadians are indifferent to a possible breakup of the country.

We hear too many predictions that separation would be relatively smooth and inexpensive - a divorce between friends.

Not only is our country in danger of breaking up, but tod few Canadians have really begun to discuss the real issues. What a waste. What a waste of precious time.

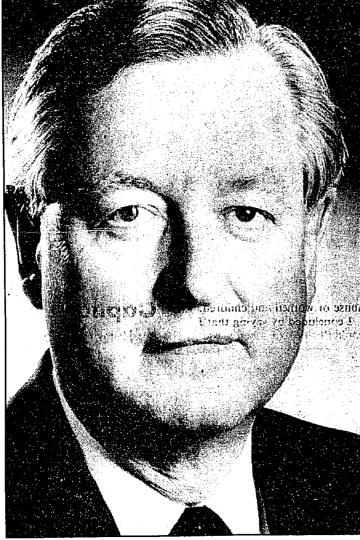

Many Canadians still do not understand that national unity and economic prosperity are cut from the same cloth. Some do not want to hear about the cost of disunity. Some are deterred from discussing it because of the risk of being labelled "fear mongers". Discussing the costs of disunity with care is not fear mongering, it is facing reality. This, above all, is what Canadians must do now — face reali-

Marches of folly are made possible by the existence of dangerous delusions. It is the delusion that a national breakup would involve only minimal costs that risks sending Canada down this road of irreversible folly.

A recent poll shows that fully 56 per cent of the people outside Quebec believe that, if Quebec separates, the economy of what remains of Canada will be unchanged, or even stronger. I am deeply disturbed and saddened by this. Like other polls, it reveals dangerous delusions about what would happen to the Canadian economy if Quebec leaves.

Who, I wonder, are these 56 per cent who think it would be safe and easy for them if Quebec left? Where do these ideas come from? How much time have these Candians spent thinking about what would really happen?

Six months ago, I hoped today's remarks would not be neccesary. By this time, I expected, a vision of renewed federation would have begun to take shape for Canadians.

Instead, partisan floundering has led too many Canadians to turn off their minds, and to close their hearts. Too many have unthinkingly accepted the agendas of groups whose policies, if implemented, would mean the ultimate destruction of Canada.

Most lethal of all is the assumption that the departure of Ouebec would resolve our difficulties. That it would solve the problems of Quebec; that it challenges we face.

Do we really need to blow Canada apart to meet Ouebec's historic concerns? Ouebec is a unique cultural island of 6 million French-speaking people in an ocean of 270 million people working and living in English. Quebec is a distinct society. Do we really need to destroy Canada to recognize and protect that reality? I say would solve the problems of the West; that it would redress the wrongs done to our First People.

This is only one of the dangerous delusions that beckon Canadians down the march of historic folly.

What Canadians shold be asking themselves first - and very explicitly - is whether disunity is the answer to the directly in determining their own destiny within Canada rights they have been denied for too long? Again, I say no.

Do we really need to blow Canada apart to address the vital need for greater harmonization of federal and provincial policies and cutting the wasteful duplication of costs?

Do we really need to blow Canada apart to make us

That separation would be relatively easy and without cost is not just a dangerous delusion; it is a real world impossibility. It is my estimation that, the costs of a break-up would be huge and long-term, and paid by everyone in Canada — here in Quebec, and in every other province and territory. No one would escape lightly; no one would fare well.

Now constitutions making is for citizens, not banks. We do not have, or pretend to have any special expertise or knowledge in this area. But this bank is almost , as, old, as, Canada. Through more than a century of working in Canada, we have gained some knowledge of how our economic system works and what it needs to work. Our business is Canada — all of Canada.

It requires no constitutional expertise to see that many assumptions in this debate are simplistic nonsense.

They assume, for example, the continuation of a common currency, a common market, a common international trade policy, and a stabilizing fiscal structure. This is not a credible scenario even in a environment of harmony and selflessness.

They suppose that all decisions would be made purely on rational economic grounds. Even if that were possible, the costs would be enormous. But history warns us that emotions would not be kept out of the picture.

We are told that, once the process of destroying Canada was over, the two smaller much less viable new countries could easily renegotiate the very economic structures that assured prosperity in the first

Let us realize that this comforting view is not just simplistic nonsense, but nonsense of a kind that destroys nations. It is not original but is very much worth repeating: If we ignore history's lessons, we repeat its mistakes. History tells us that the breakup of a country is costly, painful and long-term; it leaves very deep economic

In a dismal parade of folly, the people have lost, - or a still losing — peace, stability and prosperity.

System must change

An open letter to: Hon. Dan Miller, Minister of Forests: Dear Sir:

In the spring of 1990 I wrote the following letter to the forest minister Claude Richmond and he replied that the select standing committee on forests and lands was looking into the log market situation.

I never received any further correspondence from him and the pulp log market situation still remains the same today.

Brian Mould, Meziadin Lake, B.C. Hon. Claude Richmond, Minister of Forests: Dear Sir!

The present artificially low cost of pulp logs just has to change. It is not only hurting the logging industry but is also responsible for the high cost of sawlogs as well.

The present system forces up the price of sawlogs as this is the only way the logging industry can survive. No matter what the percentage of pulp and sawlogs in a timber stand, the only way the logging operation is made viable is by getting enough dollars for the sawlogs to overcome the loss incurred by the pulp log volume.

This is wrong and if the logging industry is to survive this has to change.

B.C. pulp mills have had a free ride for too long. The profits made ina good year with a pulp mill in B.C. are almost unbelievable, but no matter how mushc profit they show it is never reflected in the price paid for pulpwood.

In countries such as Sweden and Norway pulp mills are paying the equivalent of $100 Canadian per cubic meter for their pulpwood and they are competing very well with B.C. pulp mills. This shows us just how artificially low pulpwood prices in B.C. really are.

The present price of pulp logs will not change in B.C. without some intervention by government as the price is controlled by a handful of large companies and it is not hard to understand why they don't want this to change.

I would urge your ministry to conduct an inquiry into the pulpwood industry in

Dear Sir:

I am answering the column of Mrs. Claudette Sandecki, "Helping out Mom", April 8, 1992.

I would like very much to inform her that we have been carrying a beautiful line of maternity for 18 years. Three-quarters of our line is

If you've been disappointed about how the pregnant lady looks, it is not because the maternity clothes are not available.

Bush league education

Recent protests by parents education manual! over the public school's Year 2000 education program may be more clearly understood claim as the education president under his own System 2000.

What has B.C. parents angry is the lack of emphasis on academic skills involved in the Year 2000 approach to education. Instead it focuses on psychological testing which appears to encourage a self-actualization approach.

Students get to pick their education like they would a happy meal in a fast food restaurant.

Bush's Educational Quality Assessment plan is as bizarre as a CIA takeover of a foreign power.

It is a six-point program designed to 1) determine what is the best means of controlling the students through psychological testing; 2-3)determine if each student can be subliminally manipulated or will conform to the New World Order without question;

4) develop in each student a herd mentality; 5) determine how students will best comply to an authoritarian figure (such as, I presume, a New World Order dictator); 6) how to best alter a student's perception, ie, from a Judeo-Christian view to a New World Order view. These points are actually

By taking education out of the local state levels the new U.S. federal system will turn the school system over to industry by privatizing it. Once the multinationals get control of public school education they will determine which students will be trained as local industrial serfs: who will be trained for yuppie, post-secondary education; and who will be trained for various global programs such as government and scientific development.

As in the USSR, serendipity will be outlawed by the New World Order, along with organized labor.

I have long held the view that the USSR agreed to be disbanded because they really won the Cold War. After reading about Bush's goals for America 2000 I'm convinced that with people like George Bush and Brian Mulroney as leaders, we no longer need to look to the communists of this world as the enemies of democracy.

Showtime

Forestry Week events start this weekend.

On Saturday, May 2 there will be a parade of logging trucks. They will drive from Terrace to Thornhill. The parade begins at 11 a.m.

At 1 p.m. local loggers will show what they can do at the Thornhill Community Grounds.

Cleanup

Last Wednesday was Earth Day.

Local students were busy picking up litter to make Terrace cleaner.

In the picture at the right, Stephen Dunfield and Matthew Smith from Parkside school and Jarod Holmo from Caledonia school help clean up around Howe Creek.

Youth soccer begins again this Saturday.

This year there are 560 players in the league. There are 43 teams and five of them are girls' teams.

There will be a lot of games this Saturday. They will be played at Christy Park.

BRIEFS

Surprise

They never thought they'd see the day.

Kitimat-Stikine regional district directors were caught by surprise when a group they gave money to gave some of it back.

A $3,100 grant to the North by Northwest Tourism Association to help pay for a Yukon circle tour brochure wasn't completely usedand $1,550 is going back to the regional district.

"They've come in at half the cost and don't want the rest of the money," noted director Pete Weeber. "That's a refreshing change."

Pitching in

Neighbourhood residents have joined forces with the city to clean up parkland between Gair and Dairy Aves.

Richard Krupop wrote to council in February complaining about the number of immature pine trees littering the city-owned lot, the result of snowstorm last December. Apart from making it difficult to walk through the lot, he pointed out the debris created a fire hazard.

The city has now agreed to provide refreshments and chainsaw gas and oil for the neighbourhood volunteer work party which will do the actual work.

Emphasizing it would be a one-time pilot project, council said it was conditional on the city being free of any liability and fire department approval being obtained for any burning.

Budget climbs

The provincial aboriginal affairs ministry's budget is going up 60 per cent this year.

Figures in the provincial budget indicate planned expenditures of $12.499 million compared to the $7.752 allocated last year.

And most of that increase is being devoted to the growing business of dealing with native issues in the province.

The ministry was given $6.44 million for that last year but will receive $9.732 raillion this year...

Water search is not going well

TERRACE - Still coming up dry in its attempts to find an adequate underground source of drinking water, the city is now waiting for expert opinion on what to do next.

Following failures at the Christy Park, C.D. Adams Park and Kerr (Rotary) Park test holes, operations manager John Colongard said two further drillings were carried out.

The first was a 70ft. deep probe adjacent to the Skeena River pumphouse at the south end of Kalum St. That had shown "some promise in the long term" as far as changes to the water intake there was concerned, but offered no immediate relief to the water supply pro-

The other test was carried out close to the spring next to Parkside Elementary school. Colongard said that turned up only clay and mud, confirming the spring water originated on the bench above and surfaced on meeting the impervious claylayer at the base of the escarpment.

The geo-technical engineer hired by the city is now reexamining the geology of the area to determine whether further tests should be carried out and, if so, where. His recommendations are expected this

The search for water reflects concern that low snow packs in the Deep Creek watershed could mean the city will be unable to draw water from that source beyond early June, depending on rainfall.

Once that happens, it will be completely dependent on water pumped from the Skeena River, but the pumps can only handle 16 million litres of water daily, about two-thirds the demand on hot summer days.

In drawing up this year's city budget, council set aside $400,000 to cover the cost of locating and tapping an alternate water supply. To date, close to one-quarter of that amount has been spent.

Industry to show its stuff

TERRACE — Take a closer the Poirer yard at the west end look - that's the theme of National Forestry Week this year and there will be lots to look at.

The week kicks off this Saturday at 10 a.m. in Lower Little Park with a proclamation signing by mayor Jack Talstra after which Talstra will join longtime resident and logger Ted Johnson in a tree planting ceremony. The event is jointly sponsored by Canadian Women in Timber and the Terrace Beautification Society.

Next up, beginning at 11 a.m., is a truck parade sponsored by the Northwest Loggers Association. Any vehicle related to the forest industry can take part provided it is carrying a Forestry Fact sign. These can be obtained by phoning either Ross Holtom (635-3011) or Ken Houlden (638-1705)

The parade will begin from of Keith Ave., head to Kenney, turn left there to join Hwy. 16 at the railway crossing then follow the highway over the Sande Overpass and on to Thornhill Community Grounds.

An afternoon of loggers demonstrations will follow at the Community Grounds beginning at 1 p.m. and sponsored by a number of logging related businesses. There will also be skydivers, balloons for kids. face painting and a refreshment concession operated by the Downtown Lions club.

Volunteers are still needed for this and anyone interested in lending a hand at the afternoon events can contact Robert Brooome at 638-0793.

The day will end with a Loggers Dance and Steak Barbecue at the Thornhill Community Centre where the dress code is jeans and suspenders - loggers' attire. Dinner will be served 7:00-8:30 p.m. with the dancing getting under way at 9 p.m. Admission is by advance ticket only ($20), there will be door prizes and free rides home.

The Hire a Logger Agency, Canadian Women in Timber and the Northwest Loggers Association are sponsoring the shindig and more information can be obtained from Burga Anderson (635-5500) or Donna Diana (625-7881).

The week continues Sunday, May 3 when local Boy Scouts will be planting as many as 5,000 seedlings on Ferry Island as part of the organization's national Trees for Canada program. The Forest Service will supply the cedar, hemlock, spruce and some fir trees.

There will be more planting May 5-7 when all grade 5 classes in the area take a trip out to the Red Sand Lake demonstration

The evening of Tuesday, May 5 sees Bruce Vincent, an "environmental logger" from Montana, speak at the R.E.M. Lee Theatre. Sponsored by Canadian Women in Timber, the evening gets under way at 7 p.m. and admission is free.

During Forestry Week local students will also learn who the winners are in the essay and poster contests.

The week closes out with forestry displays in the Skeena Mall May 8 and 9 and the Canadian Women In Timber's national meeting at the Hire a Logger Agency. That meeting begins at 11:30 a.m. and new members are welcome.

Big gap in road bids

TERRACE - There was a substantial gap in the bids between the company which got the road maintenance contract here and the one which wanted it for the second time.

Nechako Northcoast Construction Services won the contract for $13.7 million over a 28-month period.

But North Coast Road Maintenance, which had the contract before, bid at least $6 million more, spokesman Lloyd Scott said last week.

"Our price was based on historical information we had on the area and on the standards to be met," he said.

"We would not want a maintenance contract at the price Nechako Northcoast have," Scott added.

Northcoast had the contract for three years when the provincial government first put out maintenance services to private companies in 1988. That was for a three-year period and was worth $13.2 million.

All told, the second round of contracts signed for the 28 maintenance areas in the province will cost taxpayers $281.8 million this year.

Comparisons between the first round of contracts signed in 1988 and this time are difficult because while the former were for three years, the second series are for varying lengths of

It's also hard to compare the prices between the first and second contracts for the Skeena area because the Nass Road and the Shames Mountain road were added later on and the amount of money subsequently increas-

TRAVEL TALK NEW ZEALAND Remance of another era Looming to the south of Christchurch, the region's main city, are the Port Hills and Banks Peninsula, an area steeped in historic associations which give the peninsula a special Drive over the soft romantic hills to the dreamy, once French settlement of Akaroa, a quaint village with French street signs, an excellent folk museum and a herb farm hailing from another era. The Canterbury Catamaran cruises Akaroa Harbour, an ancient volcano crater inundated by the sea. Over the hill, the long harbour of Lyttelton, the typical bustling little port town which serves Christchurch is a favourite with yachlies. Enjoy the country's most scenic rail journey, the Tranz Alpine Express which leaves from Christchurch and slices its way across the patchwork quilt of the Canterbury Plains, through the grandeur of the Southern Alps and on to the West Coast and Land of the takes and mountains The rolling, golden tussock-covered foothills of the Mackenzle country mark the entrance to the domain of the Alps. Here the air is unbelievably clear and pure and snow-fed lakes sparkle under highcountry blue skies. You'll be spellbound by the gargeous turquoise colour of Lake Tekapo. It's caused by the fine powdered rock carried into the lake by glacier led rivers. At the village of Tekapo, the Church of the Good Shepherd and the bronze sheep dog on the lake shore make a good excuse to stop and wonder at the irresistible panorama or mountains and water. Ski your heart oul No fess than eight ski areas are tucked into these snowpeaked mountains. One of the most popular is Mount Hutt located near the lively ski town of Methven. It is also a good base from which to try out the local salmon and trout fishing in rivers which lure fishermen from all over the world.

For a thrill you might also try jetboating their shallow, braided channels, for it was on rivers like the Waimakariri and Rakaia that the jetboat ws developed.

Reading Place starved for cash

TERRACE — Terrace's literacy centre is out of money.

Project Literacy Terrace coordinator Nat Purcell says there's enough of the centre's initial $50,000 1991 startup grant left to keep The Reading Place open with reduced hours until the end of May.

After that what will happen to the centre is up in the air.

"The funding situation is such that we're in great danger of going the way of the dodo," Purcell said last week. "Literacy programs are falling apart all across B.C. We're one of the fortunate few that are still going."

In just over a year of operating, the centre has placed nearly 60 people with volunteer literacy tutors or in its English as a Second Language (ESL) classes.

Purcell says the need for the centre definitely exists.

"For every person who comes in here there are probably five who won't," he says.

One possible way the centre could be saved is if it's absorbed by Northwest Community College, which has received a roughly $60,000 grant allocated for literacy programming.

College literacy coordinator Larry Bolingbroke says that money would be for the entire college region, but added that a decision on how to spend the grant is expected by the end of the month.

"It's basically up to the senior management at the college," he added.

Purcell says he believes a streetfront type of operation, such as the Project Literacy centre in the old Anglican Church building, is more accessible to the people who need the service than a classroom at the college.

"My own feeling is that learners won't go there," he said. "We're hoping the college will honour this initiative."

Meanwhile, Purcell is working on some other options.

He said the centre hopes to get a grant from the ministry of social services to set up a scribe service within the centre for people who need to have things read or written for them.

"There are people who don't know how to read a bill or a letter or a telegram they've received," he said.

That grant would pay much of the rent for the literacy centre.

AIDS cases climb

officials say the number of B.C. AIDS cases reported in 1991 will likely hit a new one-year high of 260 by the time all reports are in.

The most AIDS cases in one year previously was the 218 cases recorded in 1989. The number dipped slightly to 213 in 1990, as a result of the widespread use of the drug AZT, which causes a 12- to 16-month delay in the progression of HIV infection to fullblown AIDS.

And it's expected that the number of new AIDS cases will continue to increase for the next two or three years, and then level off in the last half of the decade, says Dr. Michael Rekart, director of the provincial government's Sexually Transmitted Diseases Control Branch.

He estimated that there are somewhere between 5,000 and 8,000 AIDS carriers in B.C.

'There have been 1,142 cases of AIDS in British Columbia since the first case was reported in January, 1983," Rekart said. "And of this group, 756 are deceased."

Of the 1,142 patients with full-blown AIDS, 1,028 are homosexual or bisexual males. The other patients fall into the following risk groups: intravenous drug users, blood product recipients, hemophilliacs, and heterosex-

Two babies of infected parents have also been born with AIDS and three more have tested positive for the HIV virus.

In the Skeena region, there's still only one officially reported AIDS case, says Dr. David Bowering, the area's medical health officer. Eight more people in the northwest have tested HIV-positive.

He said it's difficult to determine the actual number of carriers in the region, because some people go to Vancouver for testing and don't appear in the regional statistics.

"I still think we're in the very early stages of the epidemic here," Bowering added.

ACTING UP for Terrace Little Theatre, local actors will perform "Under Control" as part of a pair of one-act plays that open this weekend. The play revolves around the life of a family after they discover their father has died. Below, Connie Reid (Jessica Bowering) consoles brother David (Ray Mordan). The invisible man rules the stage

It's not unusual to have an "invisible" person in a play the woman who mysteriously disappears after act one, the policeman who lurks in the background only to make the pronouncement of "who done it" at the end, the phantom in the underground passages of a Terrace Little Theatre's production of Under Control is no different, except the invisible person is on stage most of the time — and he's dead.

Under Control is, at first glance, an amusing piece featuring three actors. After being in the theatre a little while, however, you are very aware of of him — in the box.

What makes father so interesting is that everyone on stage is acting the way they are, doing wild and eccentric things, because father is in the box. The action revolves around him, and he is invisible.

""What is so fascinating is that all the characters know the box is there, know that father is in it, and the box becomes a real focal point."

room they are in is also father's. So you have a box in a box, both of which are father's."

David, one of the characters in the play, views the box as an albatross, hung heavily around his neck. Connie, his sister, would have preferred an urn it has more character. And Francis... well, come and see for yourself, and after the show, drink a toast to father in the box.

Terrace Little Theatre presents Under Control as part of "2 Night" — a pair of one-act plays that open tomorrow night at the McColl Playhouse. Performances are Apr. 30, May Ist and 2nd, and May 7-9. The magical night is now mere days away as eleven young women prepare for the crowning of the city's new ambassador at the May 9th Miss Terrace 1992 Pageant. Here are profiles of the first five contestants who will be on stage for crowning night ceremonies at the R.E.M. Lee Theatre.

Kari Allen

A jazz and ballet dancer, 17-year-old Kari Allen also enjoys art, swimming and choir.

She says she entered the pageant because she enjoys meeting new people. "I'd like to build up my self confidence and improve my public speaking," she says.

Graduating from Caledonia Senior Secondary School this year, Kari plans to pursue an art career, enrolling this fall at Vancouver's Emily Carr College of Art and Design. She's five-foot-four with blonde hair and green eyes. She is sponsored by B.C. Tel.

Jodi Coulter

Miss Kinsmen, Jodi Coulter, says she wants to take some time to go travelling after graduation.

When she returns, she wants to get a job working with handicapped people or the less fortunate.

The 18-year-old student enjoys spending time with her friends, drawing and travelling. "I entered the pageant to gain self-confidence, public speaking skills, and as a fun experience," she says.

She is five-foot-eight with brown hair and blue eyes.

Dana Johanson

A Caledonia graduate this year, 17-year-old Dana Johanson has her eye on law school, but will begin her post-secondary studies here at Northwest Community

From there she plans to transfer to Simon Fraser University to complete her degree before studying law. Dana says she enjoys swimming, dancing, skiing and horseback riding. An avid reader, she also keeps her pencil sharp writing her own original works.

She's in the pageant to build self-confidence and her public speaking skills. She also wanted to take advantage of the many beneficial workshops open to participants.

Dana is five-foot-six and has grey eyes and blonde hair. She is sponsored by the Terrace Shopping Centre.

Melanie Mayner

A Grade 11 student at Cal, Melanie Mayner enjoys skiing, softball, cycling, going on long walks and spending time with her nephew.

"I'm hoping to go to college right after school to become a travel consultant," she says, "and eventually get married and have a family of my own."

Dislikes include tomatoes, spinach and inconsiderate people. She is five-foot-one in height and has blue eyes and long brown hair.

"I believe this opportunity will help me throughout my life," Melanie says, "as I hope to go into an area of work which will ask of me to be able to be comfortable with people as a group as well as on a one-to-one writing letters and listening to music. "I entered because I thought it would be a good experience," she said, adding it helps her with her public speaking. "I hope to learn how to speak in front of a lot of people, how to get myself more motivated and how I can get more confidence in myself,' she says. Liza is five-foot-four with golden-brown hair and blue eyes. She's sponsored by McDonalds, which is also where she works. The remaining six hopefuls in the 1992 Miss Terrace

Pageant — Natosha Morris, Angela Parmar, Demetra Poulios, Sarah Strachan, Fran Walker and Tricia Walker — appear in next week's edition.

Lottery benefits Seniors

The Seniors' Lottery has kicked off its ticket campaign and organizers are reminding citizens of the benefits the lottery provides to B.C. seniors.

Here in Terrace, $3,600 has been granted to two projects for local seniors from the lottery.

The Skeena Horseshoe Club received $2,500 for fencing and yard fill in July, 1985. And another $1,100 in May of 1986 went into the tables that presently grace the Happy Gang Centre.

The lottery features a $50,000 first prize, $10,000 and $5,000 second and third prizes, plus 50 prizes of $500 each and 100 prizes of $100

But the real winners of this non-profit lottery are B.C.'s seniors.

"In 10 years the Seniors' Lottery has distributed over $3.2 million to 617 seniors' groups in the province," says chairman Al Cummings.

Lottery tickets for the next draw, June 4, 1992, are available through the Happy Gang Centre.

All worthwhile seniors' projects are carefully considered. Groups wishing to apply for funding should contact the Senior's Lottery office at 810-1155 West Georgia St., Vancouver, B.C. V6E 4K1, 635-4403.

pageant is just around the corner, and the proud members of the committee would like to share with you a contestant from last year's pageant.

Andrea Arnold, Miss Fabric Boutique 1991, is this year's winner of the Northern Drugs Scholarship — a $1,000 award for excellence. She is also chosen for the Totem Furniture trophy and an award of $100 for the highest mark in vocal solo at the Pacific Northwest Music Festival.

Those of you who went down to take in some of the vocal competition and had the honour of listening to Andrea perform will know why she was chosen for these very special awards.

Andrea, 17, was born in old Hazelton on June 12, 1974. Her very proud parents are Della and Rod Arnold of Terrace.

A ten-year veteran of the festival, Andrea first performed in it in 1981 in the category of solo speech arts. At the age of eight she first started in voice after a neighbour heard her singing and suggested she take

Under the tutelage of various instructors she gained experience. She's now under the guidance of Marilyn Brodie.

She also performed in piano and is now involved in choir and band, with her first year of percussion. She performs tenor saxophone under the direction of Jeff Parr with the Caledonia stage and concert band.

Andrea just recently won the talent contest at Caledonia School. Last year she entered the Miss Terrace Pageant and

Travelling east for cinnamon

Both spices, Cinnamon and Cassia, belong to the Laurel Family. Cassia is native to Assam and Northern Burma, while true Cinnamon originated in the island of Ceylon, now called Sri Lanka. Cassia, one of the oldest spices, was recorded in a Cinese herbal as far back as 2700 B.C.

The Bible tells us that both Cassia and Cinnamon were used by Moses to anoint the tabernacle according to Gods command (Exodus 30-23 25).

In classical times Arab and Phoenician traders introduced these spices to Europe.

The dried bark of both species is available commercially in the form of sticks (quills) or ground powder. One can easily distinguish Cassia bark from that of Cinnamon, which is lighter in colour and much finer. Cassia's flavour is more intense but less frangrant in aroma than Cinnamon. It has a slightly bitter and astringent taste while Cinnamon is agreeably sweet with a delicate yet intense taster, welldefined, fragrant and warm.

The quills of both spices are rolled by hand and rolled daily until dry. This is when the quills become tan in colour and are smooth and brittle.

Thousands of years ago Egyptians used Cinnamon in their embalming blends. Romans paid a high price for that spice. Culinary uses:

Cassia is better suited for savoury dishes rather than sweet while Cinnamon is suited for savoury and sweet dishes. Cassia and Cinnamon are both at home with savoury dishes. Few East-Indian curry mixes are without the addition of Cassia or Cinnamon. Both spices are widely used in Morocco, Indonesia and Middle-Eastern countries.

Medicinal uses:

Cinnamon and Cassia are both recommended as an astringent stimulant and carminative to aid digestion and relieve vomiting. In folk medicine they are used to treat diarrhea, nausea and flatulence.

Other uses:

The quills can be crushed and added to pot-pourri mixtures and are widely used in the making of pomanders and incense.

A kitchen hint: Simmer crushed pieces of cinnamon, cloves, nutmeg and ginger root in an open pot of water. The delightful and welcoming smell will make a wonderful kitchen air freshener.

Ready for Riverboat Days

RIVERBOAT DAYS is on its way once again and this year's festivities should equal and surpass the last three years. But organizers say volunteers are needed if the great event is to be a success. Clubs, organizations, businesses and individuals can all get involved. They'll be getting the ball rolling at 7:30 p.m. tonight, Apr. 29, at the Terrace Legion, Branch 13. Anyone who has ideas, plans or input is welcome to attend. Riverboat Days is set for Thursday, July 30 through to Monday, August 3rd this year. The fireworks will be July 30. Organizers are looking for a successor to Riverboat Queen Vesta Douglas, who gave up her crown two years ago. Now they're actively recruiting a new Riverboat Queen or Riverboat Captain. Send suggestions to the Riverboat Days Society, Box 248, Terrace, B.C. V8G 4A6, or phone Maria Thomsen at 638-1854 or Mary Ann Burdett at 638-1827.

Planting trees for Canada

LOCAL BEAVERS, Cubs and Scouts will be on Ferry Island this Sunday honouring Mother Nature in the annual Trees for Canada plant.

Apart from being a conservation initiative, the event is also a fundraiser, with each boy collecting pledges to plant trees. Planting starts at 1 p.m. Sunday, May 3 at the Ferry Island campground, between the two bridges.

Tynan Weekly Features Plan of the Week

THE BEST OF EVERYTHING!

By M. TYNAN

The plan for this attractive family home incorporates a number of popular design features.

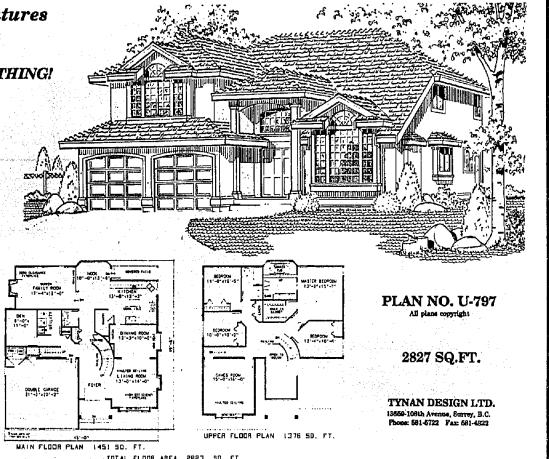

A complement to any fashionable subdivision, a stucco exterior features stylish gables, palladian windows, and a stately high arched entrance-way.

Enter through double doors into a large foyer, and your first sight is an elegant curved staricase. To the left, is the living room, which boasts a vaulted ceiling, and a window seat set into a feature window. The dining room has a window seat and a boxed out space for the hutch, and can be closed off from the noisy hustle bustle of the kitchen by a sliding pocket door. A gourmet kitchen features a walk-in pantry, a convenient work island, and lots of cupboard and counter space. A corner window over the sink, and a bay window in the nook provide for plenty of natural sunlight to this area. Look down over a railing into a sunken family room with a cozy fireplace. The den, set apart from the main traffic areas, would be an ideal spot for a home office or study room.

A private staircase leads directly to the games room upstairs, ensuring more privacy for the surrounding bedrooms area.

All four bedrooms are a good size. The master features a walk-in closet and a five piece ensuite with double sinks and a bayed out soaker tub.

RE/MAX RISES ABOVE THE CROWD!

Re/Max of Terrace first opened their doors May 1st. 1991. Their market share* for the first three months of 1992 is a credit to their hard work and the trust that buyers and sellers have placed in them.

They recognize that it is not the quantity of salespeople in an office, but rather the quality of the individual whose experience, knowledge and dedication to their clients needs is what really counts.

And that's why Re/Max rises above the crowd!

Terrace indoor champs time to do it, but Terrace emerged as champions in this year's 2nd Annual Indoor Soccer Provincial Cup.

Held to third place in the round robin, the 11-man Terrace squad put it together when it counted, edging Kitwanga's best and the defending champions 3-2, then shutting out Port Edward 3-0 to earn a berth in the final.

That brought them up against Kitimat, unstoppable early on until suffering a surprise 4-2 defeat to Port Edward in their final round robin game.

Kitimat ran into more trouble in their playoff opener, again meeting Port Ed who this time slammed the door on what had been the most potent attack of the tournament to squeak a 1-0 win.

Kitimat were quickly back on track, however, taking their next two games to come through the back door into the final.

And once there, Kitimat left no doubt their eyes were firmly on the prize. Despite being without sharpshooter Mario Lagana - red-carded earlier - Kitimat controlled the first half, scoring two unanswered goals on the way to an apparently inevitable victory.

But it was anything but inevitable to Terrace who outworked their opponents in the second half to take command.

Having already narrowed the gap to one, Terrace got a break late in the game when a seemingly harmless lob off the side boards took a strange hop. Caught off guard, the Kitimat goalie mishandled to push the ball into his own goal for the equalizer.

That set up the overtime stanza which saw Terrace intensify their attack, wave after wave sweeping into the Kitimat end as relentlessly as breakers on the Douglas Channel shore.

Having made a spectacular save only moments before, the Kitimat goalie was left with no chance when Terrace's Rickie Fagan, anticipating a bounce off the back wall, wheeled and volleyed in a single move to balloon the back of the net with the winning tally.

While Terrace celebrated the title and $1700 prize money, Kitimat consoled themselves with the runnerup's $700 haul and tournament awards for top goalie and top scorer. Port Edward took home $400 for third.

Classic run date nears

All qualify you to enter the Saturday, May 30 Kermodei Classic, the city's oldest such

It's humble beginnings were as the Annual Spring Run back in 1977 but the event has grown year by year since to become the largest in the northwest — more than 180 took part last year.

Take note this is not just an event for adult, competitive runners. The number of kids at the Classic almost matches that of adults.

Turning to the more elaborate prizes, Classic medals will be presented to the top three finishers in all 5km and 10 km categories. Framed Kermode bear photos will also go to the top male and female finishers in both the 5km and 10km events.

Locals fare well in Jujitsu meet

Local competitors in Terrace's annual JuJitsu tournament fended off opponents from northern B.C. and Alberta to take five of nine gold medals and two of three trophies contested at the Easter weekend with the trophy in the Junior Open category while Dustin Haigh scored his second triumph taking the Teen Open division. Referees for the competition were Jean Galli, Shane Palahicky, Dean Sturko, Dino Roldo and Don Steinkampf of Terrace, Abilio Demelo and Sykes Bryan of Kitimat and Barrehead's Phillip Gagnon. Terrace's Margaret Rutledge and Gaston Desjardins were scorekeepers for the events.

Turning in solid gold performances were Matthew Gyorfi in PeeWee, Bejay Gill in PeeWee Junior, Randy Brown in Junior and Dustin Haigh in Teens. On the adult side, Sandor Komlos came out on top in the greenblue-brown-black belt division.

For full results, see Scoreboard on page C2.

Big guns misfire

The Big Guns were spiked in a recent Prince George volleyball tournament, but team spokesman Richard Kriegl says victory was within their grasp.

Noting the calibre of competition in the five-team tourney was much tougher than found closer to home, Kriegl said the Guns nevertheless answered the challenge.

In the two-set, round robin games, he said the team split its first three before falling 2-0 to the stronger of the two Prince George entries.

Unfortunately, those strong performances didn't carry over into the playoff round. After losing the semi-final to Fort St. John, the Big Guns fell to the second Prince George team in the battle to decide third and fourth spots.

"Those were probably out two worst games of the tournament," Kriegl added.

The season over, local volleyballers are now turning their attention to other pursuits. However, they'll be back on the court in August when the Terrace league stages it's annual summer tournament.

Confine traffic jams on city streets

A short time ago I drove across town and got stuck in a traffic jam.

I've been stuck in traffic jams before and this particular one was nothing compared to the jams of the Vancouver rush hour - in the end I was only held up a couple of minutes.

Still, it was my first experience with auto congestion in Terrace. Up until that moment, I hadn't realized the irritating phenomenum had arrived here.

"Probably folks from Kitimat and the valleys of the Bulkley and Nass who've come to shop," I thought. But the congestion was there the next day and the next, even during the middle of the week and always after work and before dinner, the time of day that, since the advent of the automobile, has come to be known affectionately as rush hour.

When friends confirmed Terrace has an emergent traffic problem and the majority of these rush hour care belonged to Terracites, it struck me I'd been spending too much time in the brush.

Soon after awakening to the fact my town was growing, I dropped a friend off in Thornhill. It had been years since I'd been in the suburbs. In fact the last time there'd been no suburbs, just a scattered few houses punctuated by the occasional trailer court. Now there were new. shiny vinyl-sided dwellings everywhere.

The next night found me prowling the dimly lit streets of Copper Mountain looking for the home of a buddy. I spent the better part of an hour squinting at address after address. The last time I'd been in the land under the shadow of Copper Mountain. I'm sure there were still trap lines through it. Now, just as in Thornheights, there were houses everywhere.

All this took me back to my youth on the lower mainland and memories of The Skeena Angler being, sayeth the movers and shakers throughout the land.

But, as we all know, the problems associated with growth are legion. As people get more numerous, space gets less numerous. People are forced closer together, they start bumping into one another and abrasions are inevitable. In fact, many thinkers and reputable scientists have been arguing for quite some time that growth is the mother of all problems.

Since Gro Bruntland and her commission came to the obvious conclusion that to sustain growth, growth must be sustainable, leaders and resource managers the world over have been scrambling to determine how this is to be achieved. Mayber there is a source of optimism here. though we haven't seen much real progress yet.

Growth has a profound effect on our streams too. The demand for living space leads to the demand for and sale of riverside real estate which, for many reasons including flood problems and potential habitat damage, is always a poor idea. More people also invariably means more industry, more roads and improved access to rivers. Improved access leads to increased pressure on fish and wildlife by sportsmen. To ensure sustainability it is necessary to impose clear, easily understood regulations and enforce them vigourous-

The Lakelse River, for example, is an extraordinary treasure. There have been many restrictions and regulatory changes imposed on the river in the last decade and a half. If we were still operating under the limits of 15 years ago, I can tell you with confidence the trout population would be fighting for its life and it's doubtful if there would still be a viable steelhead fishery.

One more spinoff of growth in angling pressure is the increased need it creates for the practice of angling ethics. On crowded water it becomes necessary to keep moving downstream at a steady, not-too-sluggish pace so as to allow other anglers an opportunity.

Standing in one spot casting all day is unacceptable behaviour on slamon streams the world over and it is here too. If the angler wishes to fish the same water again, he simply re-enters the water at the head of the run.

If we fish in this manner, we can ensure traffic jams don't come on stream.

SPORTSCOPE Bennett, Hiren tops

By the book. That's how the playoffs for the Mixed Dart League went as the league's top performers threw true to form.

However, it took Annette Hiren an extra game to clinch the ladies title after she and Clare Groot finished tied in round robin. Marg Saulnier and Joyce Bradley finished thrid and fourth.

On the men's side Bob Bennett emerged the clear winner ahead of Ron Thyr, Ray Tank and Bill Boreham. Boreham won a playoff game against Ben Sousa to get the fourth spot.

Although the playoffs and last Saturday's fun night marked the end of the winter season for the league, mixed darts will continue through the summer.

The summer league is open to anyone and games are played Wednesday nights at the Legion beginning at 8

Calling kayakers

The Sea Kayak Association of B.C. is once again holding a three-day weekend session next month covering all aspects of the sport for all skill levels.

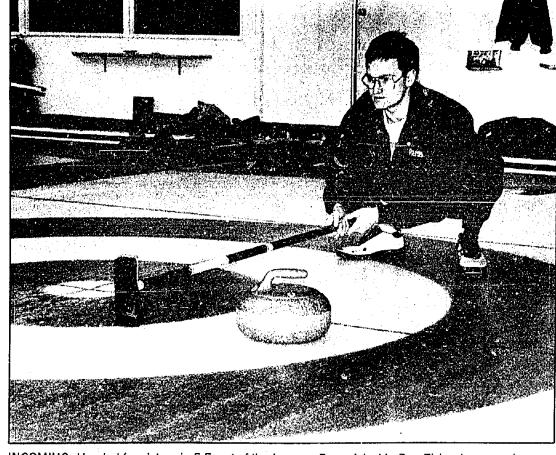

The event is being held at Pioneer Camp on Thetis Island, a three-and-a-halfhour sea cruise from downtown Vancouver. A chartered vessel will take participants to the Island on the evening of Friday, May 16.

The next two days will include workshops and lectures on kayak cookery, navigation, kayak design, fishing and knots and splices.

On-water activities will feature beginner, intermediate and advanced strokes, rescues and rolling. On the lighter side, there will also be a cardboard kayak race, kayak polo games, obstacle races and children's

Cost of the package is $220 for adults, $110 for children 6-12 years and there is no charge for youngsters under six years. A small number of boats, personal flotation devices and wetsuits are available for beginners.

For further information, contact Mercia Sixta, president of Coast Kayaki '92, at 597-1122 before 8:30 a.m. or after 8:30 p.m.

INCOMING. Headed for victory in E Event of the Loggers Bonspiel, skip Dan Fisher keeps a close eye on an incoming takeout ready to call the sweepers on if needed. With straight ice making it necessary to go narrow on the broom, the sweep played an important part in the Easter weekend Loggers

Melanson takes rink to Loggers sweep

The Williams rink, skipped Kutenics to tie. by Keith Melanson, emerged as undisputed victors in the 37th annual Loggers Bonspiel held here Easter weekend.

Having already taken the Grand Challenge away Rob Brown's Prince Rupert rink, Melanson, third Dennis Williams, second Glenn Thomsen and lead Oliver Link confirmed their dominance with 5-2 win to add A Event to their weekend tally.

Down by one after the first, Brown blanked the next two ends only to give up a steal of one in the fourth. The teams exchanged points over the next two ends but Melanson stole another in the seventh to take a 4-1 stranglehold.

Brown had a chance for two to get back into in the eighth but overthrew the draw, took his own counter out and had to settle for the single.

Providing another local victory and the most spectacular of the finals, the Kutenics rink alias the Heathens — came back from 5-0 down after three to take the C final to an extra end.

Up 7-6 in the tenth with the hammer, Rob Brise had only to make an open takeout to clinch the game. However, too much weight and straight-running ice resulted in a miss to allow

Northwest Community College and Ministry of Forests

The extra end proved a repeat and unfortunately for Brise, all too exactly. Another miss brought another steal and victory for the Terrace rink - skip Larry Burke, third Steve Kutenics, second Les Kutenics and lead Romo Romano.

Completing the local hattrick were the iron men of the Dan Fisher rink in E Event. Given teams in this one faced almost continuous curling from the pre-dawn hours through to the 4 p.m. final, it's no surprise the 'E' is said to stand for endurance.

Coming off a single in the first, Fisher stole another in the next and, after a blanked third, thieved four more points over the next three ends.

That was enough to persuade a tired MacRae (Fraser Lake) foursome — by that time into their third consecutive game to shake hands with Fisher, third Henry Rauter, second Ross Smith and lead Barry Pen-

Carrying the local colours in B event was the John Heighington rink who had the misfortune to run into a hot Smithers quartet skipped by Glen Baker. After a blanked first, Baker strung together six over the next four ends to run out 8-1 winner in eight ends.

For the Bill Holmberg rink, it was a case of so near and yet so far in the D event. Jumping out to an early 3-0 lead after two. they found themselves tied up four ends later.

A single in the seventh and a steal of one more in the next gave the home town rink an edge which Holmberg's raised double in the ninth appeared to solidify. But the Green rink, skipped by ex-Kitimatian Rick Yule, still managed two and added a final frame steal to take the event.

The victory was just reward for Yule's third Harvey Small who had produced a pictureperfect hit and roll to the four foot behind heavy cover to take the semi-final away from Gary Habinger of Kitimat.

SOCCER Youth teams in action Saturday

The Terrace Youth Soccer season kicks off this Saturday, May 2, with the traditional opening ceremonies, team photo sessions and, of course, game action in all divisions.

A total of 560 players have signed up this year and fill out the 43 teams. Of those, 24 are in the mini soccer group, 14 more make up the under-12 to under-17 divisions and the girls division covers the remaining five.

The action gets under way at 11 a.m. when the under-14 teams take to the Christy Park fields for the opening matches of the season.

The opening ceremonies begin at noon and include introduction of the teams. That takes place on field C - the one nearest the parking lot — and spectators are asked to keep that area clear.

TYS will be selling Workbooks for the younger players from 11 a.m. until 1 p.m. They cost $8 each and are the first effort to raise money for construction of washroom facilities at Christy Park. There will also be a concession and a boot exchange stand.

Soccer action resumes at 12:30 p.m. and continues until 3 p.m. Below, the full schedule of games to be played Saturday.

WEEK IN CANADA

April 26 - May 2, 1992

According to the Canadian Mental Health Association, one six Canadians will suffer some form of mental illness at one time in their life. The psychiatrically disabled can benefit from volunteering and they have a great deal to offer. However, the societal barriers around mental illness may prevent them from being given the opportunity to contribute. These barriers are due in part to a lack of understanding of mental illness. Volunteering is very beneficial for individuals who are recovering from Volunteering provides an opportunity for schizophrenia. involvement without the stress expectations of a full-time job. stress created It is therapeutic because it enables individuals to feel they have something valuable to offer. It also enables them to have contact with people and to become aware of the needs of others beyond themselves. Lack of opportunity for socialization as well as the withdrawal and disorientation created by the disease, often leaves these people feeling isolated. Volunteering is being suggested by doctors, psychiatrists, and mental health workers as it provides routine, the opportunity for social contact and a feeling of being needed. Although rehabilitation programs are needed as well, volunteering is a bigger step, because the individual is not a "client", but a contributor. This provides increased self-worth: the physiological and emotional boost that is key to (With permission from: The Volunteer Access Project, Victoria Volunteer Bureau, 1991)
