White-Tailed Deer and Cervids Research Program

Join the Deer Breeders Corp and Texas Tech University to help strengthen and promote the deer industry by researching areas that matter most to breeders. This research will ensure that your herd is healthy and profitable. These long overdue studies are in progress and we need your support.

Areas of Focus

•Drug Residues

The research outcome of these studies will provide white-tailed deer breeders with scientific data for making critical decisions in the safe application of extra-label drug use in white-tailed deer. As with domestic livestock produced for meat, these data will provide white-tailed deer breeders with appropriate drug withdrawal times, thereby, ensuring the safety of the venison when it is consumed. Ensuring that venison is free of potentially harmful drug residue is of significant importance to all parties involved, including white-tailed deer breeders, consumers and state and federal regulatory agencies.

Research Objectives:

- To characterize selected drug residue in white-tailed deer
- To develop non-invasive techniques for drug residue analysis in white-tailed deer tissue

•Diseases-CWD

•Nutritional Benefits-Sunn HEMP

•Academic & Scholarship Programs

In an effort to enhance the longevity of the White-tailed deer program at TTU, we are developing an undergraduate minor with an emphasis on the current and future areas that are important to the white-tailed deer industry. These students will have a direct relationship with the industry from the early stage of their academic careers. This will give the industry a first move advantage and create excellent advocates for the program and the industry.

Justification

Captive farming of cervids, including white-tailed deer (Odocoileus virginianus), mule deer, elk, and moose, continues to grow as an alternative agricultural revenue source, with the number of individual farms increasing by 15% during the five years from 2002 through 2007. It was reported that there were 7,828 cervid farms in 2007, including 5,654 deer farms and 1,917 elk farms (Anderson et al., 2007; USDA NASS, 2007). Frosh and colleagues (2008) reported that there were 1,060 registered/permitted cervid farming operations in Texas in December 2007.

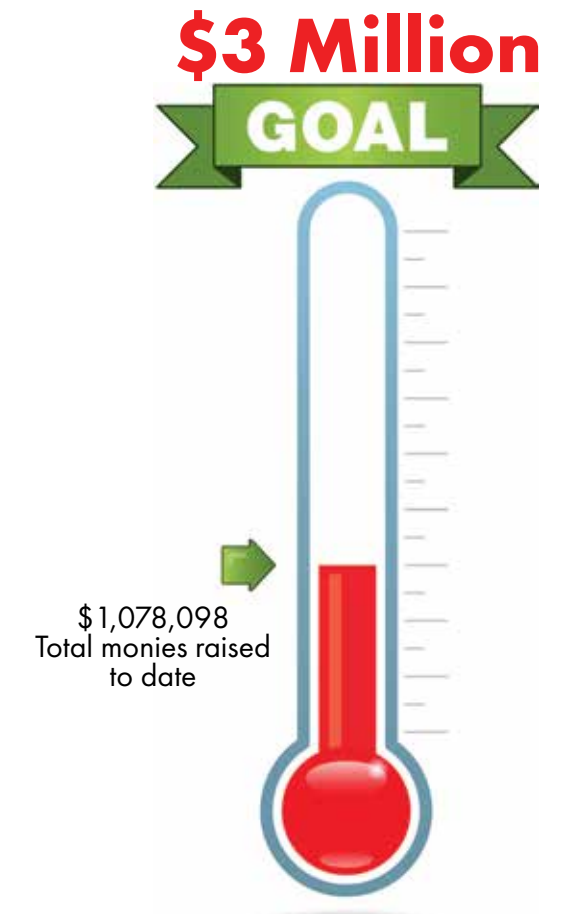

“The deer breeding industry is a growing industry in the Texas economy, particularly the rural economy. As traditional agricultural revenue sources decline in rural communities, these economies increasingly rely on new industries, such as deer farming. The industry generates an estimated $652 million in economic activity, while supporting 7,335 jobs.” (Frosch et al. 2008).

Mission/Vision/Partnership

Deer Breeders Corporation (DBC) leadership and Texas Tech University (TTU) researchers identified several specific and complex knowledge gaps and capability shortfalls that significantly and negatively influence success among commercial white-tailed deer farmers throughout Texas and the United States.

The knowledge gaps and capability shortfalls identified as the most important include pharmaceutical residue persistence, epizootic hemorrhagic disease, and the quantification of genetic qualitative traits in progeny prediction. Following the successful establishment of the DBC/TTU partnership; state-of-the art research and educational initiative to investigate both short and long term challenges relevant to the white-tailed deer farming industry have continued with limited amount of funding. This funding level has presented the program with significant challenges to continue the research focus and program development in the areas of pharmaceutical metabolism and persistence, herd management and nutritional factors that influence white-tailed deer farming. As such we urge you to support the program as the results, findings and broader knowledge gained from the research conducted will significantly benefit the management of wild free-ranging white-tailed deer populations.

TTU/DBC Research Program Funds

Researching white-tailed deer at the Texas Tech University Cervid Research Center.

Let's Grow the Industry Together!

Students hard at work at the Texas Tech Institute of Environmental & Human Health & Department of Environmental Toxicology Cervid Research Center.

Special Thanks to Our Donors!

Thanks to the following donors that donated so graciously to the TTU/DBC Deer Research program. With their generous donations we have been able to secure a facility close to the TTU campus, build pens, and are in the final stages of getting our breeder research permit. The research this program will provide to deer breeders across the country will ensure that their herd is healthy and profitable. Thanks again to you all that contributed. The fight has just begun to help strengthen and promote the deer industry by researching areas that matter most to breeders! So don't be left out, donate today!

HB HUNTING & WILDLIFE PRODUCTS

Harry Blake

Phone: 817-247-2384 | Email: hblake@blakeconstruction.net

Today's whitetail deer management requires serious equipment. HB Hunting Products protein feeders are manufactured with 16 gauge steel sidewalls and 2" tube steel. Our interior design insures that ALL of the feed drains to the bottom mounted 6" x 6" tubes for easy feeding access and creates a virtually CLOG-PROOF feeder. Our NEW corner tube placement insures the widest separation of feed tubes in the industry. This corner tube design allows over 270 degrees of visibility for feeding whitetails, making them more comfortable, while not risking potential horn damage caused by "overhead" bin designs. The tube steel angled skids have a wide stance for ease in moving. Available in 4, 6 or 8 tube models with protein capacities from 750 to 3000 pounds. The 4 tube models are perfect for ranches or small pen applications. All items will need to be picked up at the end of the convention by buyers.

PNEU-DART
Amy Sarge
Phone: 570-323-2710 | Email: asarge@pnedart.com

Pneu-Dart's X-Caliber has become the best-selling, most accurate gas-based RDD projector ever built. Q4 of 2018 earmarked the release of the X-Caliber second generation supporting a hammer-forged 39" 304 stainless steel barrel. Our first generation barrel length was 29". The X-Caliber's clean, unique design possesses a variety of features the industry has yet to experience. Located directly behind the urethane coated forearm is our rotating power control engineered to vary the muzzle velocity without taking your eye off the target. Constructed of machined aluminum and coated with a handsome, elements-resistant, satin finish, the X-Caliber is the best and most versatile of Pneu-Dart's rifled bore projectors. Benefits of the x-caliber: Reduced noise level. RDD ranges are the greatest and the most accurate in the history of the company.
